CALL FOR PAPERS

The economic take-off is the third stage of the Stages of Economic Growth Theory of Rostow. Through it, a country can avoid the obstacles and barriers that prevent the achievement of economic growth. When the resisting forces of progress are weakened, the average per capita income begins to increase, carrying with it radical changes in the economic and social structure. This is embodied by a combination of factors, most notably, the use of the national stock of competencies, which is characterized by genius, and the power of creativity and the ability to embody ideas and transfer them into real applied models.

Algeria has been searching, for decades, to reach the stage of an economic take-off by escaping from the cocoon of the "Economic Rent", in light of the exceptional knowledge and technology changes that the world is witnessing. The national competencies remain, as well as the highly qualified institutions, good governance, and community participation, the substantiality factors to achieve this take-off. In addition, the process of achieving an acceptable level of growth remains organically linked to the availability of all these factors. Particularly, the national competencies of both its types: Local competencies and those abroad as well. Especially, since there were several cases that were able to succeed in achieving their economic take-off through their national competencies, by providing several objective conditions to embody the role of these competencies. Based on the previous proposal, the problem arises as follows: What are the ways to invest in national competencies and enhance their role in achieving the economic take-off?

1. CONFERENCE OBJECTIVES:

This conference aims to:

- ✚ Provide a theoretical and conceptual rooting for competencies and economic take-off.
- ✚ Highlighting the importance of national competencies in achieving the economic take-off.
- ✚ Determining the causes behind brain drain and mechanisms of attracting them back and taking advantage of them.

- ✚ Establishing mechanisms to activate the role of the government and organizations in nurturing competencies and employing them to achieve the economic take-off.
- ✚ highlighting the importance of good governance in stimulating and supporting the duality, (competencies/ economic take-off).
- ✚ Benefiting from the experiences of some countries.
- ✚ Linking the topic to the latest local, regional and international issues such as the Covid-19 pandemic, which strongly demonstrated the role of national competencies in crises
